The Phonix Park Murders. members of the British Parliament Tuesday night, declared his entire disbelief in the accusation made against the Irish leaders. Mr. Gladstone said that in May, 1882, immediately after the assassination of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Under Secretary Burke in Phenix Park, Mr. Parnell wrote him a letter with reference to that crime. The contents of the letter, which had obviously been written under great mental dis-tress, threw considerable light upon the topic of the present hour, and were strong evidence in favor of the contention that the London Times's letter was a base and malicious forgery. Mr. Parnell, apparently for-seeing that in the public mind he would be associated with the crime, offered to place himself without reserve in Mr. Glad-stone's hands. He wrote that he regarded the murders with the utmost abhorence, and he offered to resign the leadership of the Irish party and retire altogether from political life if Mr. Gladstone considered such a step adviable in the interests of Ireland. Mr. Glad-stone said he would refrain from saying what reply he made, adding that it was only a short time since he obtained Mr. Par-nell's assent to his mentioning the matter. A curious story is current in London to the effect that the famous document repudiating the Phoenix Park murders, which was issued over the signatures of Messrs. Par-nell, Davitt, and Dillon immediately after the assassination of Cavendish and Burke, was formulated upon the advice and with the assistance of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain. The responsibility for this addition to the already voluminous and conflicting history of the Phonix Park tragedy is ascribed to the widow of a gentleman who was at that time a prominent Irish politician, who as-serts that her husband, on the day the mur-nd-class matter.

It has transpired that Mr. Gladstone, in his speech at the dinner given by labor at that time dissuaded from acting upon their resolve to permanently retire from pub-lic and political pursuits. sion of terrific explosions occurred yesterday morning in the Bolton dyeing, printing and bleaching company's mills in the village of Bronxdale, Westchester county, New York. The shock was like an earthquake, and extended to a radius of three miles. The mill was discovered to be on fire at half-past three o'clock yesterday morning. The flames were shooting up fifty feet high, lighting up the country for miles around. Suddenly an explosion occurred that shook the little country houses in the immediate neighborhood to their very foundations, threatening to shake them down. Men, we men and children rushed out of their houses in their night clothes, screaming and wringng their hands. The first explosion was followed in rapid succession by four others, that tore oil the roof and end of the mill and sent bricks, shingles and debris sailing through the air a distance of a hundred yards. The fire was got under control at six o'clock. The mills are owned by Thomas and Henry Bolton and Wil-liam H. Birchall. The loss is estimated at about $150,000. Mr. Birchall said that the explosion was caused by the tin cylinder drying cans, of which there were one hun-dred in the mill. Wet cloth is rolled over
